Section 1: Services & Treatment

Prof. Tian has helped many people suffering from different kinds of illnesses. Her patients often come with the whole family and through the patient's friends. Prof. Tian uses her family advanced acupuncture treatment.

- Tian's "Xuan—Yuan" Jing Luo
- Tian's "Xuan—Yuan" auricular Meridian

Both Advanced therapy techniques yield highly effective results.

Assessment of health condition and TCM diagnosis is based on Chinese Medicine theory (Ying-Yang, Wu-Xing, Quixue, Jin Ye) and Meridian (Jing Luo) system to the concept of the organism as a whole.

TCM Diagnosis Way in order to get the patients signs and symptoms

- 1.) Observation of the Face, tongue, eye, ear, and body.
- 2.) Listening
- 3.) Interrogation
- 4.) Pulse taking

Acupuncture treatment

The basic theory of acupuncture treating health problems is through meridians (Jing Luo) system, which transports oxygen and blood to all organs of the body. The meridians connect the body's internal organs with the external body. And also connects the organs with each other through meridian branches, forming a network connecting all parts of the body.

Chinese Herb Remedy

Chinese herb remedy is formulated on the basis of the differentiation of syndromes, history of illness, and individual conditions. It follows the TCM theory—in that—all patients show signs and symptoms in relation to the whole. In light of the principle, I offer herbs prescriptions make a customized herbs formula.

We also offer meridian scraping/ meridian clipping therapy and nutrition and food counselling.

Section 2: Professional Qualifications & Medical Experience

My education and clinical training for the medical professional started in 1977.

In China:

From 1977 - 1982

- 1.) M.D Degree (5 years study and internship at West China University of Medical Sciences, now West China School of Medicine, Sichuan University, Sichuan Province, China)

From 1986 - 1989

- 2.) M. Sc. Degree (3 years specialist training in Cardiology) at the same University. Supervisor was Prof. Luo Xueju.

From 1982 - 1993

- 3.) I was a former associate clinical professor and medical doctor working at the West China University hospital. I had an active medical practice from resident, doctor (chief resident) and associate professor in charge of the university hospital for 11 years.

Education programs related to TCM and Acupuncture spanned the first 5 years, including human anatomy, microbiology, pathology, physical diagnosis pharmacology, biology, topographic anatomy, biochemistry, physiology, pathology, pathophysiology, etc.

During the third school year (1979-1980), I studied traditional Chinese medicine and acupuncture courses including:

- 1) Basic theory of TCM (Ying—Yang, Wu-Xing Qi Xue, Jin Ye). The theory of Five Zang and Six Fu. The jinluo (twelve JingMai and LuoMai, Eight extra-QiJingBaMai, etc. The four traditional ways of diagnosis of observation, listening, interrogation and pulse taking. The differentiation as Ying Yang, BaGang, Six Jingluo, SanJiao.

- 4) Acupuncture (Zhen Jiu Xue)

1981 - 1982

Internship for TCM and acupunctural clinical practice at the West China Hospital, department of TCM and Acupuncture (I passed the exam with an “A” grade). The professor was a famous TCM doctor in China named Huang Shenyuan.

In Canada

1993 - 1995

I continued my advanced study of Herbology, prescription of TCM, classics of TCM (NeiJin, ShangHanLun, JinKuiYaoLue and WenBing). And I practiced TCM and acupuncture as apprentice in my apprenticeship with Prof. Yifang Tian. Prof. YiFang Tian is a professor at Chengdu University of TCM College of Acupuncture, and TuiNa; she also was a professor at the Institute of Chinese TCM and Acupuncture in London, Ontario. From 1993-1994, she was the Director and General secretary of CMAAC, and from 1994-2012, she is now the academic advisor of CMAAC as well as a qualified TCM practitioner at her Waterloo and Guelph Clinics. I worked in the clinic for two years, six days a week.

1995-2013

For 18 years, I continue as apprentice TCM and clinical researcher with Prof. YiFang Tian on the weekends at her Waterloo clinic.

I also opened my own Chinese Medicine and acupuncture clinic in London, Ontario. As a director and practitioner of TCM and acupuncture, I have served thousands of Londoners with great results.

In February of 2013, my clinic was voted by the London community newspaper as the Best Acupuncturist Winner. I was deeply moved by the local newspapers kind award and words of encouragement directed towards my practice.
