Assessment of a patient's health condition and TCM diagnosis is based on Chinese Medicine theory (Yin-Yang, Wu-Xing, Quixue, Jin Ye) and the Meridian (Jing Luo) system to the concept of the organism as a whole.

This is the way TCM Diagnosis gets the patient's signs and symptoms:

- 1.) Observation of the face, tongue, eye, ear and body
- 2.) Listening
- 3.) Interrogation
- 4.) Pulse taking

Acupuncture Treatment

The basic theory of acupuncture treating health problems is through meridians (Jing Luo) system, which transports oxygen and blood to all organs of the body. The meridians connect the body's internal organs with the external body. And, also connects the organs with each other through meridian branches, forming a network connecting all parts of the body.

The Ear Acupuncture

- The ear is a micro body
- Every organ and every place (joint, spine, hip, leg, shoulder, etc.) has its own heart, liver, brain, kidney, lung, etc. which reflect auricular points.

- The face is a micro body, all meridians cross the face. So, watch the face because it can show which organ has problems and also help assess the patient's health condition.

- The tongue and foot both are micro bodies. So, through watching the tongue, we can get a TCM diagnosis and the patient's health condition can change.

Foot Reflexology

Chinese Herb Remedy

Chinese herb remedies are formulated on the basis of the differentiation of syndromes, history of the illness and individual conditions. It follows the TCM theory—in that—all patients show signs and symptoms in relation to the whole. In light of this principle, I offer herbal prescriptions and make a customized herbal formula.

We also offer meridian scraping/meridian clipping therapy and nutrition and food counselling.
